TO AGENTS. toria Chamber of Commerce. It has been truthfully said that a cold-blooded and crafty politician, when he would be thoroughly revenged on his enemy, makes the injuries which have been inflicted, not on himself, but on others, the pretext of his attack. He thus engages the world as a partizan in his quarrel, and dignifies his private hate by giving it the air of disinterested resentment. It is by disclaiming his personal animus against Vancouver Island as a Colony, and professing to be actuated by a desire to benefit both Colonies, that Governor Seymour-another batch of whose libels we publish this morning-has dared to approach the Colonial Office with his Munchausenisms and present them as serious facts—the result of a pure and disinterested desire to do his duty towards the Colony he was sent out to govern, while he carefully avoided even the appearance of injustice towards its rival. That he has succeeded but too well in disguising his true feelings, and in humbugging Mr Cardwell, is palpable from the humiliating terms offered us in the Union Bill--the acceptance of which would virtually close the doors of our warehouses forever, and establish not only the capital but the centre of trade at the City of Stumps. That the gubernatorial libeller was aided by the mistakes of more than one of our public men, is evidenced by the avidity with which, in the despatch that we publish this morning, he seizes upon the result of the Victoria election as a pretext for stating that the Chamber of Commerce Memorial is an "expression of the opinion of a beaten party," and, although the "source is respectable," it is not entitled to much weight. After stating that his Legislative Council are opposed to Union, he revives the old slander against the harbour of Victoria, and adds his own remarkable experience in the Leviathan. But Mr Seymour carefully conceals from the knowledge of the Secretary for the Colonies the important fact that vessels drawing seventeen feet of water are brought safely over our bar and discharged at our wharves. Such cases are not at all isolated. And we venture to assert that there are pilots in Victoria who could bring even that monster-ship, the Leviathan, safely across the dreadful sand-bar. But how could we expect a governor who confesses that he patch he acknowledges are "respectable." In could not "distinguish the entrance to the concluding paragraph the following ex-Victoria harbour" to cross the bartraordinary sentence occurs. Can it be read especially if the attempt was a postwithout a feeling that when Mr Seymour prandial one! Mr Seymour next takes penned it he expressed the state of his own mind at the "slight deviations from the path the entrance to Fraser River under his notice and cites in its favor the report of Admiral Kingcome, who, it will be remembered, early in '64, crossed the sand-heads in H. M. S. Tribune and reached New Westminsterin safety. Unfortunately for Governor Seymour, the gallant Admiral's report was made while the Tribune sence of candor" as a proof of the "earnestlay at New Westminster. In this res port shipmasters are told how to get into the river; but as the Tribune, a he has a right to tell as many falsehoods as tew days afterwards was descending he sees fit. Viewed from Mr Seymour's the stream, she "grounded," and her stand point, this may be pure logic and in Days. All Goods now guns and ammunition were taken out strict keeping with his code of morality; but and brought into the "narrow and we cannot see how be can first declare the tortuous harbour of Victoria" and discharged on the Hudson Bay Coms pany's wharf. Several days were required to get the unfortunate vessel off the sand-heads, and although Lord Gilford's report, attributing the ble respect for the position he so unworthly disaster to the "dull white colour of a fills, they entertain none whatever for the pole which marks the channel," is author of the libels to which he has affixed given, not a word is said of the Admiral's second report. That is carefully concealed. But we have it on good authority that a report was made in which the Admiral stated almost in as many words that while he could tell mariners how to get into the river, he was unable to indicate the course they must follow to get out of it without disaster! The "objection" of Governor Seymour to the "present system, whereby our (their) traffic is artificially conducted up the narrow and a dangerous locality-some twenty or thirty miles in length, to visit which expense to shippers, instead of being only half a-mile in length, and lying directly in the path of vessels bound to and from New Westminster. Mr

Seymour next thrusts at the Hudson Bay Company for running their steamiards, then, that Victoria was built up and New Westminster depopulated. We always thought that natural advantages had something to do with the prosperity of Victoria, but it seems we were mistaken. Governor Seymour proceeds, to draw a gloomy picture of the state in which he found New Westminster. "The blight had early come. Many of the best houses were untenanted. The largest hotel was to let, decay appeared on all sides, and the stumps and logs of the fallen trees, blocked up most of the streets. New Westminister appeared, to use the miner's expression, "played out." This dismal picture was the effect of Hudson Bay Company rum, billiards, and Governor Douglas, who is alluded to as the Munchausenite's "predecessor." Now, every one here knows that the little greatness New Westminster ever knew was acheived under the Douglas regime; that prosperity was general under the cheap system of government that prevailed. Stores and buildings sprang up on every side spanned by bridges; taxes were light and customs duties scarcely felt, But the "blight" in the form of Governor Seymour and his Staff settled down like locusts on the embryo metropolis and its greatness was gone. Its "largest hotel" is still " to let;" its "best houses" are still "untenanted" and "decay is visible on all sides;" "stumps" still "block up most of the streets" and the place is about as near "played out" as was Goldsmith's "Deserted Village." Verily, the sister Colony has flourished under Mr Seymour's reign. The debt which the "blight' found so heavy when he arrived in the Colony has been quadrupled; (notwithstanding the great trunk road had been constructed the year previously,) the expenses of govern-ment have been increased threefold, while its efficiency has not been increased. Passing over the question of indebtedness and the illnatured fling at Victoria merchants through whose enterprise and capital, it is notorious, Governor Seymour and his satel lites have been enabled to live and enjoy their fat salaries, we come next to the case of the schooner Onward, which vessel, cleared from Victoria with supplies for coal miner engaged at Queen Charlotte Island in developing the resources of British Columbia, and was compelled by an illiberal law to proceed to New Westminster to clear. Finding the Fraser closed by ice, as it is every winter, the schooner ran up to Burrard Inlet whence the captain crossed to New Westminster, but failed to procure a clearance The vessel must be brought to New Westminster first. This order, owing to the icy impediments, could not be carried out, and the schooner returned to Victoria and discharged her cargo. A plain statement of this fact, with affidavits, was sent home by the Chamber, and Mr Seymour says it is "widely inaccurate." He encloses the statement of Mr Hamly, Collector of Customs which, he says, "disproves" the assertions of fifty men, who in the first part of his des-waiting" for the San Francisco "steam-and billiard rooms and drinking sal-

New Westminster." It was with of truth" of which he had been guilty? "But I take this carelessness or absence of candor as the most convincing proof of the earnestness of the signers. There must be much feeling; respectable men must suffer much before they allow themselves to deviate however slightly from the strict paths of Mr Seymour takes "this carelessness or ab ness" of the Chamber of Commerce. The impression thus sought to be conveyed is members to be entitled to respectful consider ation, and in the very next breath, denounce them as falsifiers. If this be Mr Seymour' test of respectability, we can tell him it is not that of the people of this Colony; and that, while they entertain the greatest possihis sign-manual.

COPY OF A DESPATCH FROM GOVERNOR SEY-MOUR TO THE RIGHT HON. EDWARD CARD-WELL, M. P. NEW WESTMINSTER, March 21, 1865. (Received, June 29, 1865.)

Sir:—I have the honor to forward a printed paper of which I have become accidentally possessed, containing certain resolutions passed and statements made by the Chamber of Commerce at Victoria. 2. You will observe that these resolutions and statements, which attribute somewhat unworthy motives to the Government of this unworthy motives to the dovernment of this Colony, were transmitted to you before I became officially aware of their existence. Heel that I should be neglecting my duty to Her Majesty's Government and to British Columbia were I to pass unnoticed statements emanating from a respectable source, and which have been published with something which have been published in the daily periapproaching to accuracy, in the daily perisodicals of the neighboring Colony. Of the resolutions, had they been unsupported by the statements, I should not have had to complain. They are the expression of the opinion of a beaten party. You are aware that the candidates on the Free Port side were rejected at the last Victoria elections. The beaten party have, however, the support of the people of Vancouver, in so far as they advocate a union with this Colony. With us, the Legislative Council has on more than one occasion, unanimously protested against the proposed connexton.

3. I will pass over the earlier portions of the statements, but must pause when I reach identified by Mr Thorne, and Kelly will grace the statements, but must pause when I reach the assertion that Victoria-I have no word the assertion that Victoria—I have no word to say against Esquimall—possesses "a capacious and convenient harbor, approachable at all times, by night or day, for sea going ships of every burthen." I must refer on this point to the highest authority I can procure, that of Captuin Richards, R. N., the present Hydrographer of the Navy. In his salling directions for Vanoauma Lland, page present Hydrographer of the Navy. In his sailing directions for Vancouver Island, page 20, I find, "The entrance to Victoria harbor, is shoal, narrow and intricate, and with S.W. or S.E. gales, a heavy swell sets on the coast, which renders the anchorage outside unsafe, while vessels of burthen cannot run in for shelter unless at or near high water. Vessels drawing 14 or 15 feet may, under ordinary circumstances, enter at such times of tide, and ships drawing 17 feet of water have entered, though only at the top of spring tides." Captain Richards proceeds to state that in the harbor "the space is so confued and tortuous, that a long ship has great difficulty in making the necessary ture; a large per centage of vessels entering the port, small as well as large, coostantly run aground from these causes." Further on, "it appears not a little remarkable that, with in for shelter unless at or near high it appears not a little remarkable that, with the excellent harbor of E.quimilt within two miles, Victoria should have been continued as the commercial port of a rising Colony, whose interests cannot but suffer material; from the risks and delays which shipping from the risks and delays which suppring must encounter in approaching the commer-cial capital." He concludes his notice of the harbor, while allowing that Victoria suited the former wants of the Hudson's Bay Com-pany, but has been a fatal mistake at a later date not to have adopted Esquimalt as the commercial capital."

commercial capital. A Limil add my own personal testimony, though entirely noncessary, to that of Capuain Richards. After threading in safety by the chart and compass on a dark night the narrow channels among the islands of the Gull of Georgia, I have found myself scarcely able to determine which of the indentations of the coast was the harbor of Victoria. No light of any kind marks its entrance, and in a small steamer, drawing but 3 feet 6 inches, we have shared the fate of the large per centage of vessels, small as of the "large per centage of vessels, small as well as large," and run aground. well as large," and run aground.

5. I wish to dispose of the questions relating to natural features, raised by the Chamber of Commerce, before following their arguments into political matters. Having thus lauded the barbour of Victoria, they proceed to deal in a less generous manner with Fraser River. The statements assert that the "intricate, narrow, and uncertain channel through the sand heads at the mouth of the Fraser, is available only for ships drawing 16 feet of water at the utmost, and the Building, Government Street formerly the Enterprise Saloon. They have received per "Mohawk," a large assortment of Men's Clothing and Under Clothing, which will sell lower than any house in town.

RAINBOW—One of the most magnificent solar rainbows that we have witnessed, illustrations for the book already quoted: "Fraser River, in point of magnitude and present commercial importance, is second only to the Columnary of the Most cial importance, is second only to the Columbia on the Northwest Coast of America. In its entire freedom from risk of life and shipwreek, it possesses infinite advantages over any river on the coast, and the cause of this immunity from the dangers and inconveni-ences to which all great rivers emptying ences to which an great rivers empying themselves on an exposed coast are subject, is sufficiently obvious." Captain Richards then alludes to the "fixed and unvarying character of the shoals through which this magnificent stream pursues its undevious course into the Gulf of Georgia, and there can be little doubt that it is destined at no distant period to fulfil to the utmost, as it is afready partially fulfilling, the purposes for which nature meant n—the outlet for the products of a great country." In descending the stream on reaching Langley, 12 miles above New Westminster, Captain Richards finds that "the river becomes a broad, deep, and placid stream, and, except during the three summer months, the influence of the flood stream is generally felt, and vessels of any draught may conveniently anchor. The depth is ten fathems; the current not above can be little doubt that it is destined at no any draught may conveniently anchor. The depth is ten fathoms; the current not above three knots. Vessels of from 18 to 20 feet draught, may exter the Fraser, and proceed as high as Langley, or a few miles above it, with ease, provided they have or are assisted by steam powerr. The only difficulty is at the entrance, and that is easily overcome by providing pilots and the means of maintaining the buoys in their position. The Chamber of Commerce speaks of the "intricate, narrow, and uncertain" entrance. I have already quoted Caotain Ri hard's expression of "undevious," By adds later, "that the stream-has forced an almost straight though marrow passage." I may strengthen the refutation of the alleged "uncertainty" of the entrance. I had the channel recently resurveyed by Mr Pender, R. N., charged with the Admiralty survey of this ceast. He surveyed by Mr Fender, R. N., Charged with. the Admiralty survey of this coast. He found that it had sustained searcely any appreciable change since the passage was first marked out on the settlement of the Colony.

6. The statements made by the Chamber of Commerce on matters susceptible of proare somewhat remarkable. I hardly assume, are somewhat remarkable. I hardly assume, in a body professing to represent the commercial capital and intelligence of the two Colonies, an ignorance of a book of sailing directions for their coasts, "published," as the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty." If Captain Richards is in error, and his sailing directions calculated to lead ships into danger, his statements ought, in the interest of commerce, to have been boldly met. But he has been left aside unnoticed and assertions directly opposed to those made public by the directly opposed to those made public by the

Admiralty, have been officially forwarded to you.

7. Although my own considerable yacht-I. Although my own considerable yachting experience has led me to rely with the utmost confidence upon Captain Richard.' directions, I feel that statements emanating from a Chamber of Commerce are at least cattled, where I allow myself to doubt their correctness, to the respect which requires care in refutation. I add therefore, in superst of the directions of the Hydrography. ort of the directions of the Hydrographer of the Navy, the enclosed letters from Vice Admiral Kingcome, lately Commander-inschiet of the Pacific Squadron, and Captain Lord Gilford, commanding H. M. S. Tribune, Victoria Chamber of Commerco. These letters were published in the official Gazette of this Colony.

8. Admiral Kingcome notices that the arrival of H. M. S. Tribune, drawing 19 feet 6 inches, opposite this town, most "conclusive-ty proves that direct communication from New Westminster can be carried on by ocean New Westminster can be carried on by ocean ships of large tonnage." He says, further, "the approach to the entrance of Fraser River possesses many advantages over that of the Thames. In the first place the water is much smoother, and it is not exposed to any sea such as that raised in the North Sea by eastern gales, which, in many instances, has caused the loss of ships. Seconds and the state of the state of the same and the stances, has caused the loss of ships. Secondly, there are no outlying sands, and the channel is not near so tortuous, and marks can be placed on the land, which in the Thames is nearly impossible. Thirdly, the weather is much clearer and the position of a ship more easily fixed. Fourthly, the anchorage in English Bay is far preferable to that in the Downs. In both rivers, ships must wait for the tides, and with the same or even half the precautions in the Fraser that are used in the Thames, a perfect stranger would have no difficulty in taking ships ger would have no difficulty in taking ships drawing 19 or 20 feet to New Westminster. 9. In leaving the river the Tribune un-ortunately grounded. Lord Gilford, in fortunately grounded. Lord Gilford, in showing that the accident was caused by the dall white color of a pole which marks the Channel, reports to the Commander in-Chief Channel, reports to the Commander-in-Unier on the station; "Il deem it my duty to state that notwithstanding Her Majesty's ship under my command having taken the ground on her outward passage, I am of opinion that vessels drawing from 18 to 20 feet could enter the Fraser in perfect safety, provided the channel be property buoyed with marks which can be seen at a reasonable distance."

The Chapter of Commence is a wave, that The Chamber of Commerce is aware that great improvements have, since Lord Gilford wrote, been made in the channel; that iron bucys have been ordered out from England, and tenders are invited, not only in our local papers, but in those of Victoria, for the con-struction of a lightship for the mouth of the ction of a lightship for the mouth of the

10. I admit that Esquimalt possesses all the advantages ascribed to it jointly with Victoria, but the "fatal" mistake alluded to by Captain Richards now causes irritation and inconveniences in both Colonies. I can see no objection to merchandise destined from us being transhipped in Esquimalt, but [do us being transhipped in Esquimalt, but I do object to the present system under which our traffic is artificially conducted up the narrow and tortuous harbor of Victoria, causing a great loss of time and increase of expense. I have no certain information as to the amount of delay, but I believe three weeks elapse after the arrival of a ship in Esquimalt harbor before any portion of her cargo reaches New Westminster.

11. The 12th paragraph states that under a former rule the advancement of each Colony was regarded as the benefit of the other, unquestionably, even now the legitimate anquestionably, even now the legitimate advancement of each Colony is regarded as and loss to which a vessel was exposed, by having no alternative, but to clear at New Westminster, when the doing so became physically impossible, on account of the ice on the river. I send a statement of the case, advancement of each Colony is regarded as the bonefit of the other, 12. I am in ignorance of the motives which induced Her Majesty's Government to make two Colonies of the British Possessions to the westward of the Rocky Mountains, to lay on the river. I send a statement of the case, made by the collector of customs at this port, from which you will observe, how widely inaccurate are the statements of the Chamber of Commerce. Mr Hamley also disaproves all the assertions respecting the closing of the river by ice for four months in the winter. Without further explanation, let me simply say, that during an official experience of upwards of 20 years, I have not met with a series of statements, so carelessly made up by so respectable a body.

19. But I take this carelessness or absence of candour as the most convincing proof of out the plan of a city of vast dimensions near the mouth of the Fraser, and to sell the lots on the faith that on them would stand the future Capital of British Columbia. If the mainland was to continue to be the depenmainland was to continue to be the dependency of an outlying island, no second capital was required and steps ought boldly to have been taken, regardless of the private interests of the Hudsons Bay traders and others, to erect a great commercial town on the fine harbor of Esquimalt. Unquestionably, under the rule of my predecessor, Victoria became the principal English port on this coast, and New Westminster commenced a perrograda course early in its history. It 19. But I take this carelessness or absence of candour as the most convincing proof of the earnestness of the signers. There must be great feeling; respectable men must suffer much before they allow themselves to deviate, however slightly, from the strict paths of truth. Doubtless the old position of the merchants of Victoria, engressing the whole traffic of British Columbia, without sharing in its burdens, was an enviable one, but the larger Colony lanquished and grew weeker under the operation, and threatened to deprive Victoria of its commerce by simply relapsing into wilderness. Let us hope that a tetrograde course early in its history. It sould hardly have been otherwise. The Governor and other public officers drow their full salaries from British Columbia and results in the control of the course of the c and indicate the state of the s the seat of Government and of commerce, the miners immediately on their arrival from the gold field. The San Francisco steamers called at Esquimall, only, and thus passengers for California had no inducement of any kind to remain even a few hours, voluntarily in this Colony. While waiting for the steamers the miners spent their money in Victoria, and thus billiard rooms and drinking saloons arose, and the place acquired sufficient importance to depopulate New Westminster without attaining any solid foundation or considerable prosperity for itself. The Chamber of Commerce speaks of the Trade with China, the Sandwich Islands, Rossian America, and other places. How, if this be important, is it that the prospect of a portion of the traffic of British Columbia, taking the short and underious routes by the Fraser, give this Colony.

20. I enclose an article from the North Pacific Times, of the 17th March, on the subject of the resolutions and statements of the Chamber of Commerce.

I have, &c., short and undevious routes by the Fraser, shakes the whole of Victorian society to its foundations, and causes a state of political ferment such as the Island has never seen? Victoria did not attain any solid prosperity while having her interests set above those of this Calony and of the whole of Victoria this Colony and of the whole of Vancouver Island not included in the town lots. Let me ate how British Columbia fared. 13. I had not seen, even in the West In-die's so melancholy a picture of disappointed hopes as New Westminster presented on my arrival. Here, however, there was a display of energy wanting in the tropics, and thous-ands of trees of the largest dimensions had been felled to make way for the great city expected to rise on the magnificent site seleced for it. But the blight had early come, ted for it. But me onget had early come, many of the best houses were untenanted. The largest hotel was io let, decay appeared on all sides, and the stumps and logs of the fall-in trees blocked up most of the streets. Westminster appeared to use the miners expectation and the streets of the streets.

14. But it would have been urged, before the excitement in Victoria, that the two Colonies prospered, and that therefore it matters but slightly if those who bought land matters but slightly if those who bought land in New Westminster were losers by the speculation. It is not for me to report on the condition of Vancouver Island, but I have to state that British Columbia did not prosper. You are aware of the passionate appeals for separation which came from this Colony. The revenue of 1864 fell short of the Estimate by $1.5000 and but for the conditional. ate by £15,000 and but for the accidental discovery of gold on the Kootenay, at the close of the year, the receipts would have shown a deficiency of £21,000 on the estimated revenue. At the time of my taking over the Government these was a local debt of £53,858 in addition to that incurred in of £53,858 in addition to that incurred in England, composed chiefly of Road Bonds and an overdraw account at the Bank of British Columbia. The miners were not prosperous and the laborers in Cariboo had diminished in number. What class was there there is a superscript of the control of £50 more than the Merchants there but few. thriving? Merchants there but lew. The Charaber of Commerce states (para, 22) that there is not at this moment a single importing mercantile establishment throughout the Colony. Yet the number of traders who have taken advantage of the Insolvent Debtors Act was one-third greater in 1864 than in 1863. Perhaps, however the country gentlemen who had introduced large capital, and acquired land at a low price, were the class who flourished while their interests drooped. Not so, I regret to say. Prosperity has not yet favored their meritorious labors. The
